

Prof. Jiu-Yao Wang, MD, DPhil. (Oxon.)

Dr. Jiu-Yao Wang is now a distinguished Professor of Pediatrics, and director of the Allergy and Clinical Immunology Research (ACIR) center at National Cheng Kung University Medical Center, Tainan, Taiwan. After the clinical resident and sub-specialty training of pediatric allergy, clinical immunology and rheumatology in the National Taiwan University Hospital, Taipei, from 1984-1987, he has been appointed as Lecturer (1989), Associate Professor (1992), and Professor (2000) at College of Medicine, National Cheng Kung University, Tainan, Taiwan. He obtained Doctor of Philosophy (D.Phil.) degree in the MRC Immunochemistry Unit, University of Oxford, United Kingdoms in 1996. Dr Wang's lab has been focused on the genetic, environmental, and immunological studies of innate immunity of allergic and asthmatic children in Taiwan for more than 25 years. These studies have produced more than 130 SCI papers and cited more than 2,000 times. He has held several academic awards, including 37th, Ten Outstanding Young Persons in Medical Research Award (1999), Taiwan Junior Commercial Chamber, Taiwan, and Gold Medal of K.T. Li Foundation for the Development of Science and Technology. (2014). He has been the president of Taiwan Academy of Pediatric Allergy, Asthma, and Clinical Immunology (TAPAACI), Board member and Congress Chair of 2013 Asian Pacific Academic of Allergy, Asthma and Clinical Immunology (APAAACI), and now serving as president of Taiwan Academy of Allergy, Asthma, and Clinical immunology (TAAACI) and 2nd Vice president of APAAACI, the national delegate and board member of educational council of World Allergy Organization (WAO).